● SKIPPER'S MOTIVATION

Greg: I am really excited to return to Caen this September to participate in the amazing Normandy Channel Race with my good friend and co-skipper Jack Trigger. It is a special privilege to be able to return for my sixth consecutive race. After our first season in Swift in 2024, I am looking forward to the intense racing and to the camaraderie and friendships in the class. There is no better way to start the season than a visit to Caen and the Normandy Channel Race and, for us, Swift is the perfect boat to carry our message. I am pleased to sail this year with the red and blue burgee from the St. Petersburg Sailing Association from my hometown of St. Petersburg, Florida.

Jack: The project with Swift offers a special chance to return to the class and to promote education and raise awareness around diabetes, the project specifically targets technical solutions to help manage the condition, whilst leveraging the huge opportunity to improve the reach of available medical advances, and life-changing technological developments, supporting the whole diabetes community. Our Mission is not just a competitive one; diabetes is an epidemic, one of the biggest of the 21st century, and offshore sailing is such a fantastic analogy for living with the condition. The Normandy Channel Race is a real challenge, it's the perfect platform and with this amazing boat we hope to continue to show the sailing community, the diabetes community, and the world, what's possible.
